V.

- 1. The subject-matter of the present claims complies with the requirement of novelty since the state of the art on record does not disclose or suggest controlling the temperature of the anodes and/or cathodes in a molten salt process for producing Al.
- 2. The possibility of improving the cell performance by e.g. keeping the cathode surface free from deposits, preventing excessive dissolution of the anodes (Al contamination) and prevent oxidation of the cathode current leads justifies the acknowledgment of an inventive step.
- 3. For the purpose of the present report, claim 38 is interpreted as a use claim as indicated in the Applicant's response of 22.07.04.
